

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a system and a method for simplified management of data described with an extensible markup language, wherein the data is structured in the form of objects, wherein components of the objects can be stored in first data files. The components represent a logical unit of an object, wherein a second data file having first means for referencing the components is provided as higher, object-based logical level for storing the objects.